On page three of this issue you will see an article entitled "In Quest of Yesterday" written by Nila Reynolds, regarding the history of the Haliburton area. The above picture will give our readers some idea of the village of Haliburton as it looked over 100 years ago. On the right is a building which we understand was our first post office. The other building was the birthplace of the late Wm. E. Lucas, the first white child born in Haliburton. These buildings are on the present site of the Haliburton United Church.

Signal Lights At Highland And Maple Sts.

A special meeting of the Dysart council was held in the council chambers on Tuesday, June 28 with all members present, with the exception of councillor Earl Cooper.

Council have for some time felt the need of a signal light at the intersection of Highland and Maple streets and they have requested the Dysart Telephone system to install same. The municipality will bear the cost of installation. The light will be for the convenience of the provincial police. A motion was passed at this meeting to appoint Sidney Roberts as fence viewer and weed inspector for the year of 1960.

CANCER FUND SUCCESSFUL

The Haliburton County Cancer Society are pleased to announce that they have received $1,440 in this year's cancer drive.

Council To Expropriate Roadway

At a special meeting of the council held on July 2 at 10.30 a.m. with all members present, the council gave final approval to a by-law calling for the expropriation of a roadway across lot 15, concession VI in the Township of Gairdner. The width of the piece of land to be expropriated is 63 feet.

This piece of roadway we understand, is located on the site of the new proposed Redstone Brook bridge. This is the bridge which was started last fall, but as yet is not completed and council have notified the architects that they wish to have work started on the bridge as soon as possible.

Parking in the town of Haliburton continues to be a problem and despite the fact that the council have been very lenient in respect to the parking by-law a number of car drivers show little concern.

During the next two months parking facilities on Highland and Maple streets will be taxed to capacity and council are asking those who find it necessary to drive their cars to work, not to park them on these streets during working hours.

The street that runs past the CNR station is able to provide parking space for a considerable number of cars and it is to be hoped that our businessmen and their employees will co-operate in this matter.

There will be lots of room after Labor day so let us provide parking space during the next two months in order that those who wish to come in and do their shopping will be able to find parking space. Most of us can do with the extra business.

It has been brought to our attention that because the parking by-law does not cover Maple St. a large number are parking their cars all day on that portion of the street that lies between Highland St. and the municipal hall. Surely for the next eight weeks these people should discontinue this practice.

Grand Ole Opry Show Coming To Minden

Country music with its traditional sincerity and flavor finds eloquent advocates in Wilma Lee and Stoney Cooper, who will appear with a Grand Ole Opry show coming to the Minden centre on Friday, July 8 at 8.30 p.m.

Stoney and his wife, Wilma Lee, are veterans of the radio networks. They first became nationally famous as a result of their many appearances on the "World's Original WWVA Jamboree" from Wheeling, W.Va.

In 1955 they were offered a contract with radio station WSM, Nashville, Tenn., to be co-featured with the stars of the Grand Ole Opry. They accepted and have added greatly to their popularity with their many Grand Ole Opry broadcasts which emanate from the Ryman auditorium in Nashville.

Wilma Lee and Stoney Cooper will bring their own band with them. Known as the Clinch Mountain Clan, this group of highly talented musicians is named for the West Virginia mountains, near which the Coopers were born.

Wilma Lee and Stoney sing and play with great intensity, giving rich feeling and direct impact to their numbers which often bring back memories of earlier days. Several of their favorite selections are in the sacred field. Accomplished as song writers, they have used original compositions for several of their best selling records.

Personal appearances keep Stoney Cooper, Wilma Lee and the Clinch Mountain Clan very busy. They often play to packed houses, and have set many attendance records. They have a tremendous number of loyal followers in the U.S. and Canada.

The Coopers just recently completed a highly successful 18 day tour of the Maritime provinces of Canada where they attracted standing room only crowds in such cities as Halifax, Glace Bay, Sydney and Windsor in Nova Scotia; Moncton and Fredericton in New Brunswick and Charlottetown, P.E.I.

IN QUEST OF YESTERDAY

A HISTORY OF HALIBURTON

by NILA REYNOLDS

PREFACE by the author

The preface of my quest of yesterday happened one sunny afternoon in 1930 when the patriarch of Boskong, Mr. Thomas Mason, who came to Stanhope Township in 1860 on the advice of C. R. Stewart, picked up a little maid with taffy curls and lifted her to his knee. The grand old man had celebrated his 101st birthday in February, I my first in March. Many girls sit upon the knees of gentlemen but seldom is there an age difference of 100 years.

Stories have always fascinated me, especially those of our Haliburton pioneers whose lives were so colored and seasoned by our rugged highlands. My great-grandfathers William Cooper, Henry Jones and Christopher Sawyer, who came to the county in or before the 1870's and Alex Morrison who arrived in the 1880's, give me a very personal stake in Haliburton's past.

Too many of our people are more familiar with the television and movie version of American history than with that of their own county which abounds in deeds of valor.

For cold blooded daring in the face of danger and calculated risks against terrifying odds, the river drivers and loggers have no peer. I would match them against all the American gunfighters whoever disturbed the peace of the old west from Bat Masterson to Billy the Kid. For skill in woodcraft and knowledge of the great outdoors the trappers of Haliburton are second to none.

To take up land in the primeval forest, far from the comforts of civilization, required the heart of a lion and the faith of a martyr. To clear it and build a permanent home required the back breaking labor of a lifetime. One quality our Haliburton pioneers had in abundance . . . courage. How they needed it!

This spring, several years too late to do the subject justice, I began my quest of yesterday. It has brought me in contact with some of the most interesting people it has ever been my privilege to meet: Mrs. Lila Laking, whose wonderful scrapbook collected during her lifetime and that of her mother who was a daughter of Capt. John Lucas, the Municipality of Dysart's first reeve, has provided a wealth of material; Mrs. Elwood Austin, the daughter of John Lucas Jr., owner of the Grand Central Hotel, who has carefully preserved so many souvenirs of the town's past; Mr. W. R. Curry whose exciting life should be preserved in a biography; Mr. G. H. Windsor, whose grasp of municipal history has been invaluable; plus a host of others all over the county without whose gracious co-operation this series could never have been written.

It is a personal theory that no one is truly dead as long as one living person remembers them with affection. Here are the stories of Haliburton's pioneers, their triumphs and tragedies. To them I humbly dedicate this chronicle—"remembered with love."

CHAPTER ONE

The Missing Pages of Haliburton's History

From infancy Indians were trained to erase their back trails and elude pursuit. Never is this more obvious than when one attempts to trace their whereabouts in Haliburton County. In spite of numerous flint articles and several burial sites which have been found here, anthropologists and archaeologists have never excavated here to any great extent. Written histories of Haliburton to date dismiss the Indians with a brief paragraph. One is forced to consult the history of Peterboro County and the Victoria County centennial history written by Prof. Watson Kirkconnell.

Except for the lyrical names the Indians bestowed on our waterways, Koshlong, Miskwabi, Madawaska and Kawagami, they have vanished like the impact of their mocassins in the wet sand at the lake's brink.

It is fortunate that the memories of the early settlers prove more rewarding; their evidence, plus historical fact induces one to assume that in the past the Indian population was much heavier than is now popularly believed.

With 600 named lakes and additional rivers and creeks the supply of fish, a staple in the Indians' diet, has always been abundant. Fur bearing animals large and small to provide food and clothing are still numerous. Before the advent of the whites they must have been almost as thick as raindrops in a summer storm. Birch bark for canoes and wigwams is native to the region as are most of the edible berries which grow wild. Excellent clay for pottery is also available plus any quantity of the rushes which were used to weave baskets. Where the necessities of life are plentiful you will find Indians!

In 1934 reserves were inaugurated and from then until 1860 the Indians from this area were gradually settled on them. Consequently the early settlers encountered only a few scattered families who made seasonal visits to their old camping grounds. The myth sprang up that the Haliburton region had hosted only a small floating Indian population. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

The Laurentian shield of which our highlands are a part is recognized as one of the oldest rock formations in the world. Its once proud peaks of granite and gneiss have been worn away by eons of erosion by wind, water and frost. Before the Rockies were or Mount Everest challenged the sky, our hills looked down on the primordial world.

In spite of the continual assault of the elements, there are several places in the county which are at least 1,400 feet above the sea level, notably on the hills above Hall's Lake and near the old Eagle Lake school which overlooks a vista reminiscent of Scotland's Loch Lomond.

Archeologists assert that man came on the Ontario scene as early as 25,000 to 30,000 years ago. Finds at Lake Traverse in the Algonquin Park are dated at 3,000 B.C.

In Burleigh Township, adjoining Haliburton County are found the petroglyphs, a series of prehistoric rock carvings. These figures of humans, animals and reptiles are considered to be of paramount importance since they represent a higher culture than that attained by any of the known tribes.

The Mound Builders, who were a northern branch of sun worshippers, originated in Mexico and once inhabited all the land east of the Mississippi from Mexico to Ontario. In the south their achievements paralleled that of the Egyptians whom they resembled. In the south they built stone pyramids with mortar but further north these were replaced by mounds of earth and rubble—in some instances in the form of birds and animals,

These people understood how to work metal; they had mastered the rudiments of astronomy, mathematics and architecture. With primitive tools they built great cities of stone which remain today to startle and challenge our modern world. Their Emerald Mound in Mississippi is 35 feet high and covers seven acres. The man hour represented by such a structure are incredible. Only a community with an agricultural economy capable of supplying food to a large labor force could achieve such an undertaking. Certainly it was beyond the capabilities of the Indians who inhabited Canada when the white men arrived.

That this culture extended into central Ontario is proven by the Serpent Mounds 12 miles from Peterboro which contain evidence of a civilization at least 2,000 years old. In addition there are two burial mounds on Ghost Island in Balsam Lake and possibly one somewhere on the Hay & Co. or International Cooperage timber limits.

According to Prof. Watson Kirkconnell's history of Victoria, written around 1921, sometime during the 13th century an Algonquin or Woodland migration inundated the Mound Builders. Barbarians move inward but civilized ideas move outward against the human stream.

It was at this time possibly that some of the tribes, assimilating the ideas of the older culture, started to practise agriculture. The Algonquins remained hunters. It is calculated that it takes an area of 20 square miles to support one family. Too often they revelled in the luxury of summer idleness when food was plentiful and shivered in their draughty wigwams when the Manitou of famine and pestilence rode the winter storms.

Walter Kenyon, curator of the Royal Ontario Museum, dates the 1955 discovery of a complete palisaded Indian village in Pickering Township on the Valley Farm Road as belonging to the Glen Meyer period dating back a thousand years. Some of the pottery uncovered combines Iroquois and Woodland designs. This is the first tangible evidence of a connection between the tribes.

Similar in so many respects, the Hurons and Iroquois who were genetically two branches of a common stem, like some brothers, developed an antipathy for each other which was further inflamed by economic conditions resulting from their trade with the white men.

When Jacques Cartier arrived in North America in 1535, its entire native population numbered only a little over a million. Hurons were the first aborigines encountered for at that time their tribes extended from the Great Lakes north to Lake Nipissing area and as far east as Quebec.

When Champlain came to Huronia the Hurons were consecrated in the territory between Lake Simcoe and the Georgian Bay. The Jesuits record 32 villages in Huronia containing 700 long houses which sheltered over 12,000 adults.

Both Iroquois and Huron villages were constructed from poles and elm bark. Canada's first apartment dwellers, they lived in long houses, each of which contained 20 families. Sleeping bunks lined each side of the building and the cooking fires in the centre, which must have provided a maximum of discomfort with their acrid smoke, were shared by two families.

Jesuit letters of 1590 and 1615 report that the menace of Iroquois war parties raiding up the natural highway of the Trent Valley system had made the Victoria, Peterboro and Haliburton regions unsafe from surprise attacks. The Rock and Deer Hurons who formerly lived there, sought refuge in Huronia.

Col. George Laidlaw, who did extensive research on the Indians of Victoria County, listed 55 Huron villages and 48 other sites most of which were distant from the lakes and water courses and the roving enemies who traveled them. These people practised primitive agriculture but were not above an occasional cannibal feast. The Jesuits at Fort Ste. Joseph, 12 miles west of Orillia, mention an invitation to a feast the main course of which was to be a hundred Iroquois prisoners. They declined with thanks!

Huron burial customs also require a strong stomach. Every 12 years all the people who had died during those years were disinterred and carried by their relatives to a central burial pit beside which a "feast of the dead," complete with funeral games and orations, was held. Four such pits are to be found within a 16 miles radius of Lindsay.

The Hurons supplemented their diet of corn (the only native American grain), beans, pumpkins, squash and sunflower seeds with the flesh of dogs, bear small game and venison supplied by their own hunters or their Algonquin allies.

To the south the Tobacco Nation cultivated this plant exclusively and used it to trade for all other commodities. Tobacco was not a self indulgence but an aid to religious contemplation smoked only on religious occasions to aid communion with the spirits.

Both Iroquois and Hurons dressed in smoke cured animal skins sewn by the women. Valuable fur ceremonial robes were lavishly decorated and preserved for generations. Face painting, like many of their customs, was dictated by necessity. Our soldiers adopted it in World War II and renamed it camouflage.

Although men wore only breech cloths in summer, the women's sack type dresses were usually decorous. However, the Jesuits, during a festival to which they were invited, were profoundly shocked when the female dancers wore only wampum and hair oil (made from sunflower seeds). Huron morals were inferior to those of the Iroquois. Both solved the homosexual problem by allowing a boy, when he went apart at the age of 12 to have his "medicine dreams," to choose whether he would be man or woman. If he chose to be a female, from that day forward his lot was with the women.

Huron divorce was easy and experimental marriages were consummated with no more ceremony than the acceptance by the woman of a gift, usually wampum. Like some Hollywood ladies, who marry frequently for gain, a really attractive girl without moral scruples could collect a fantastic amount of plunder. Once a child was born, the marriage was considered ratified and the squaw settled down to the perpetual drudgery of preparing clothing and meals, gathering firewood and tending the children and fields. Should she survive to become the clan matriarch, she wielded a power, equal if not superior, to a chief. Moral laxity dictated the reckoning of descent and inheritance from the mother. A hereditary chief succeeded to his title from his maternal uncle. Rank, title and possessions depended on

In addition to tribal distinctions, nearly every Indian in North America belonged to one of the eight clans whose totem animals were, in order of their importance, tortoise, bear, wolf, beaver, hawk, deer, snipe and heron.

Belonging to a clan was the most important fact in the life of an individual. Every other clan member was automatically a blood brother sworn to avenge his wrongs. Murder, robbery and other crimes of violence were automatically eliminated except in rare instances, for a crime against an individual, be he chief or orphan, brought down the vengeance of his entire clan.

Every family was represented by two clans with the children assuming their mother's. It was considered the greatest abomination for two members of the same clan, though living miles apart in another tribe, to marry.

Religious taboos concerning hunting and fishing were actually excellent game laws. An Indian killed only for necessity. Before losing the fatal arrow he would humbly ask pardon of the animal's spirit, assuring it that he took its life because his family was hungry. No wonder the wholesale slaughter of game animals and birds by the whites outraged the Indian and incited him to war.

The medicine men of both tribes, chosen for their superior intelligence and trained from boyhood to guide their tribe's destiny, were expert students of human nature. Sometime in January when inactivity and winter boredom had frayed tempers to the breaking point, the wily sachem declared a feast. To the rhythm of drums and chants, the accumulated spleen was dispersed by strenuous dancing and games. A social people, the Indians delighted in feasts, which they held at the slightest pretext, games of all kinds and the more serious councils. Inveterate gamblers, a village would often challenge its neighbor to a game of lacrosse, wagering everything they owned on their team's victory.

A gift for oratory assisted the popularity of the Indian story teller. However, their art could be practised only in the winter months when the spirits were sleeping and would not take offense when their names were mentioned.

BANK OF MONTREAL REPORT

Sharply reduced borrowing in the U.S. in recent months by Canadian provinces, municipalities and corporations has been a major factor in the decline of the premium on the Canadian dollar since March, according to the Bank of Montreal's Business Review for June, just issued.

"By the same token, the few large issues sold in recent weeks may go far to explain current relative steadiness in the rate," the bank says.

Tracing developments in the Canadian-U.S. exchange picture—with the Canadian dollar currently at a premium between one and two per cent—the B of M says the situation has produced both advantages and disadvantages for Canadians.

"Canadian exporters, other recipients of foreign funds and visitors to Canada welcome the change, while importers, Canadians traveling abroad and those who must meet foreign currency obligations find themselves at a financial disadvantage compared with a few months ago.

"Indeed, most Canadians are directly or indirectly aware of the altered exchange rate, and discussion of its causes and effects has been widespread."

Two to Five Per Cent
Reviewing events in 1956-1959, the bank recalls the massive volume of foreign capital flowing into Canada. The volume was so large that it not only provided "the means of settling Canada's large deficits on merchandise and other current account transactions, but resulted in demand for the Canadian dollar that kept the premium in a range broadly between 2% and 5%."

This pattern continued into the early part of 1960. But after March the trade deficit widened and, even more important, Canadian borrowing in the U.S. declined.

These factors combined to squeeze the premium on the Canadian dollar to less than 2%, and this situation has continued more or less without charge until the present.

"Market psychology" can, for short periods, accentuate movements in exchange rates the review says. But, in the longer run, "the rate is bound to be determined by the underlying ebbs and flows of real international transactions on both current and capital account, which bulk so large in the functioning of the Canadian economy and which themselves are always changing," the B of M review concludes.

We'd give it, yes and more,
To see our dear Aunt Hazel
Come smiling through the door.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Dear Sir:

May I take this opportunity to relay the warning issued by the Ontario Department of Health regarding rabies.

At this time we are welcoming hundreds of children and adults from cities as well as other parts of the country. Many are naturally tempted to catch, pet and make friends with the various animals they see around the lodges or cottages.

Mr. M. B. Dymond, minister of health for Ontario, reminds us that rabies is present in the wild life of Ontario and may at times assume serious proportions. Any warm blooded animal may become infected, including fox, skunks, rabbits, squirrels, chipmunks, cats, dogs, sheep, cattle, etc.

Rabies is spread from one animal to another through the saliva, hence the great importance of animal bites.

If a person is bitten or scratched by, or comes in contact with the saliva of a suspected rabid animal, the affected parts should be thoroughly washed with soap and water immediately. A physician should be consulted without delay so that further indicated precautionary measures or treatment may be undertaken. Bites from stray and unknown animals should always be regarded with suspicion.

Precautionary Do's

And Don'ts

1. Teach children to observe wild life at a safe distance.

2. Do not coax, play with or handle wild animals or touch any animal found dead.

3. If it becomes necessary to handle a dead wild animal or suspected rabid animal, wear leather mitts which should be washed in a disinfectant solution after use.

4. Be constantly mindful of the possibility of infected animals when camping, hiking or on vacation.

5. Do have family pets, cats and dogs, vaccinated against rabies by your veterinarian. Farm animals should also be protected.

6. Keep your dog in control at all times whether there is a municipal by-law or not. Be a good neighbor.

7. Before organizing a fox hunt, or attempting to destroy wild animals in dens, consult your local game warden. Do not use poison bait.

Precaution and prevention are pillars in building and maintaining good health.

Let us see what we of Haliburton County can do.

Thank you.

Yours sincerely,

Gertrude F. Miller,
Public Health Nurse.

24 HOUR SERVICE PHONE 228

PEN PICTURES of PARLIAMENT

by C. W. Hodgson M.P.

I am writing you these few lines today in reference to our national health and welfare program, which is of particular interest to our aged citizens, and affects nearly every other one in Canada.

The Hon. J. Waldo Mon-teith, minister of national health and welfare has announced the following changes in the Old Age Security Act as approved recently by parliament.

1. A pensioner will no longer have his pension cheques suspended when he leaves Canada. Whatever benefits he is entitled to will be mailed to a pensioner at his foreign address.
2. A pensioner who has resided in Canada for at least 25 years since his 21st birthday may continue to draw benefits even if he lives abroad permanently.
3. A pensioner who has not resided in Canada for at least 25 years since his 21st birthday may be paid his pension outside of Canada for the month in which he leaves the country and for an additional six months' absence.

According to records of the Department of National Health and Welfare, most recipients of old age security have the necessary residence requirements to qualify for permanent out of country benefits.

It should be pointed out further that the required 25 years after 21 does not have to be a continuous period.

In addition, any residents after age 70 can contribute to the 25 year requirement. For example, a person coming to Canada at age 47 and living continuously in the country until age 72 would meet this qualification.

Persons who cannot meet the 25 years requirement represent only a small proportion of old age security recipients. They will, however, enjoy two advantages over their previous position:

(a) On leaving Canada, they will not have their pension cheques suspended but will continue receiving them at their foreign address.

(b) They will be able to remain out of the country for eight months less two days without loss of benefit as against seven months less two days as was previously the case. They could, for example, leave on October 1 and return as late as the following May 31.

A pensioner who is away from Canada and has the necessary 25 years residence after 21 can have his pension benefits reinstated without returning to Canada. He need only make an application to the regional director of old age security in his former place of residence in Canada. No matter when this application is filed, his pension will be reinstated with effect from July 1, 1960.

A pensioner who is away from Canada and does not have the necessary 25 years residence after 21, will be eligible, on his return to Canada, for any benefits due him under the previous legislation.

When considering leaving Canada either for temporary or indefinite absences, pensioners are asked to contact the regional director of old age security in their area to make arrangements for the continued payment of their pension.

The above is a short outline of the amendment and simplifications of the old age security act, in the hope that it will prove helpful to the people of Canada and to my constituents in particular.

As the session is drawing to a close this will likely be my last letter to you, through the courtesy and generosity of our weekly newspapers.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Parker spent the week end at the Fountain farm.

Miss Dora Dawson is now at her home for the summer months.

Harold and Earl Dawson were home for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Sisson visited relatives over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bowers and children were at Milton Dawson's for the week end.

Miss Lottie Hawkins and Doris Thompson were at Annie Fountain's on Tuesday.

KITE FLYERS

play it safe!

Kites are fun, but remember these important rules—they apply to all airborne toys on a string.

Never fly a kite near hydro lines. If the string is wet and touches live wires electricity could travel from the power lines down the string of your kite to you. The danger is increased if the kite has a metal frame. Never use a wire or a wire reinforced string to fly a kite. Always fly them in an open area.

Never try to get back a kite if it is caught on any overhead wires or electrical apparatus. Better to lose your kite than risk your life or serious injury.

PARENTS—Safety education begins at home. Be sure your children follow the above safety rules.

This important message is being published throughout Ontario in an endeavour to prevent a recurrence of serious accidents and power blackouts which have resulted recently through the misuse of kites.
